

Contents

- vii Acknowledgements
- ix Introduction. What Does It Mean to Be or to Become Chinese?: Interdisciplinary Reflections on Chinese Identity
Daniel A. Bell

SECTION I: A RELATIONAL WORLDVIEW

- 3 Chapter 1. To Be or To Become a Chinese, That Is a Question
Zhao Tingyang
- 23 Chapter 2. What Would Confucius Say?
Everyone Is (More or Less) Chinese
Roger T. Ames

SECTION II: HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVES

- 55 Chapter 3. Ancient China: Inclusive and Exclusive Conceptions of Chinese Identity
Yuri Pines
- 81 Chapter 4. Rethinking Han Chinese Identity
Patricia Buckley Ebrey

- 117 Chapter 5. Reflections on the Zhong Guo and the Yi Di with Reference to the Middle Period

Peter K. Bol

- 141 Chapter 6. The Qing Empire: Confucian Universalism and Manchu Privilege

Wang Hui

SECTION III: WHAT “CHINESENESS” OUGHT TO BE

- 165 Chapter 7. Filial Piety for Modern China

Wang Pei

- 185 Chapter 8. The Dilemmas of Becoming Chinese in Taiwan

Max Ko-wu Huang

- 205 Chapter 9. Tianxia and Its Decolonial Counterparts: “China” as Civilization, Not Ethnicity

Shuchen Xiang

SECTION IV: THE CHINESE CITIZEN

- 233 Chapter 10. The Evolution of Modern Chinese Nationality Law: A Historical Perspective

Albert H. Y. Chen

- 261 List of Contributors

- 263 Index